Serving Lemon Grove and nearby communities

Thursday, September 7, 1989 25¢

Great American Bank to open at Lemon Grove Plaza

Great American Bank, the oldest financial institution in San Diego County, is moving into Lemon Grove with the grand opening next month of its newest branch located at the Lemon Grove Plaza.

For Branch Manager Reginald Davis, the drive to work will be a short one. He's a Lemon Grove resident and lives just a half mile away.

"I can't wait to open our doors and start serving the community," Davis said. "It's a special pleasure for me because the Bank's customers are also my friends and neighbors."

Davis joined Great American in January and has 10 years of banking experience.

The new branch manager earned a degree in public administration from San Diego State University and briefly worked at Great American while he was a student.

"That was almost 10 years ago," Davis recalled. "But I remember how impressed I was with the Bank and its emphasis on customer service and community involvement. Today, those are still the top priorities at Great American. That's why I think we'll be successful in Lemon Grove. It's still a fairly small, tight-knit community here. We all have a lot of pride in our city. And local business leaders routinely pitch in and help promote Lemon Grove."

Davis added that he plans to involve both himself and his Great American staff in local merchant promotions and civic activities.

"We're going to show Lemon Grove that we're proud to be here," he said. "Whatever we can do to help improve the community, we'll join with other local business organizations and do it."

Davis is on the Board of Directors of the San Diego Boys Club and a member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., a national service organization that assists youth groups and charities.

The Lemon Grove branch is Great American's 64th retail banking office in San Diego and 130th in California. The 3,400-square-foot office features the Bank's familiar blue tile roof and has four teller windows and four new account stations, as well as a merchant teller station. It also has a drive-up window and a 24-hour automated teller machine (ATM) with night depository. The public is invited to attend grand opening festivities from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, October 7. Food, music and spin-the-wheel prizes will be featured.

Great American, headquartered in San Diego, is the nation's eighth largest savings institution with $16.5 billion in assets and 249 retail banking and lending offices in five Western states.

The Child Abuse During Pregnancy Prevention Act

By Pete Wilson, U.S. Senator (R-California)

If there remain any who persist in the delusion that use of illegal drugs is a victimless crime, let them walk through a neo-natal intensive care ward full of babies innocently addicted to crack or PCP or alcohol.

Let them listen to the especially piercing, incessant crying of crack babies, and let them watch these pathetic infants writhing so violently in their cribs with withdrawal they must be swaddled to avoid doing themselves injury.

These babies are victims. They are victims of child abuse through the umbilical cord.

We are seeing only the tip of the iceberg, but already America is paying a terrible price for our failure to avert a tragedy of truly epidemic dimensions—substance abuse by pregnant women. The use of illegal drugs or abuse of alcohol during pregnancy causes cruel suffering and lasting impairment and damage to the hundreds of babies being born each day innocently addicted to drugs or alcohol.

The emotional and physical suffering of these children is something a civilized society cannot tolerate. Our failure to address the problem results in incredible costs both in human misery and tax dollars.

According to the National Association for Perinatal Addiction, Research and Education, at least 375,000 babies were born in the U.S. last year to mothers who abused alcohol or used illegal drugs during pregnancy. That amounts to 10% of all live births in the nation and marks a growth rate which is, to understate it substantially, dramatically increasing. We are experiencing a crack baby explosion.

The initial cost of hospital care totals more than $13 billion a year, now. Heaven only knows what it will become if the problem goes unchecked.

Use of cocaine or serious abuse of alcohol during pregnancy produces severe and irreversible injury to the child. Low birthweight, prematurity, deformities, retardation, other severe developmental disabilities, stroke—all are caused by substance abuse during pregnancy.

It is a tragedy impossible to measure fully, but thank God, it is preventable. While expensive, we have to provide widely available, quality preventative outreach and treatment that will allow mothers capable of turning away from substance abuse to do so early enough in their pregnancy to prevent even greater injury to their babies.

That is why I have introduced legislation in the Senate, S. 1444, The Child Abuse During Pregnancy Prevention Act, to create five $10 million grants to states to set up comprehensive programs for the prevention of illegal drug use and alcohol abuse by women during pregnancy. It is a desperately needed beginning.

The Act would offer grants to states that:

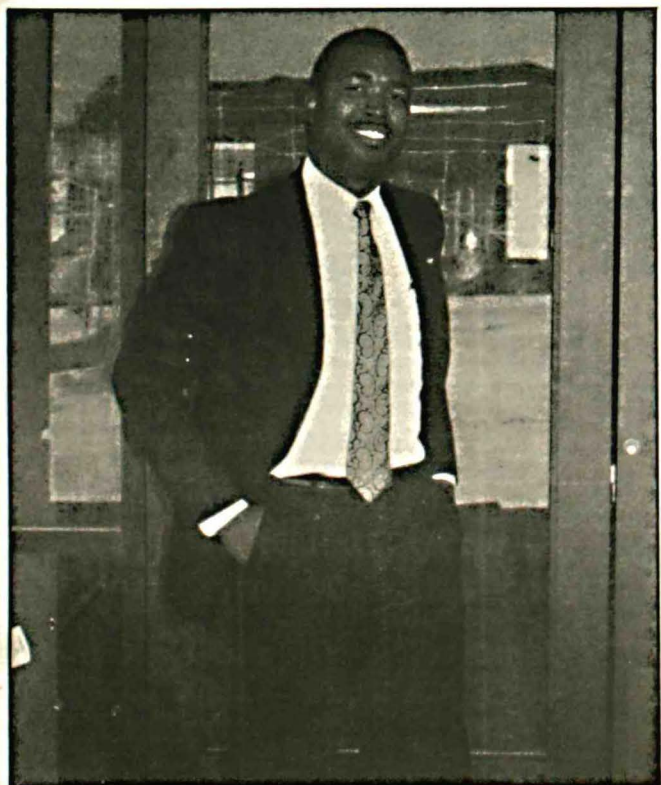

- Offer a comprehensive approach for the prevention of illegal drug use by pregnant mothers, including preventive outreach, education and treatment;

- Provide mandatory rehabilitation to substance-abusing mothers who give birth to a baby who is addicted or otherwise injured or impaired by the mother's substance abuse during pregnancy;

- Condition probation on abstinence from substance abuse and from association with known drug users, and offer to mothers who have successfully completed probation and the opportunity to have their records expunged;

- Afford to a mother undergoing mandatory rehabilitation the opportunity to keep her baby with her if the mother is competent to function in a maternal capacity.

Highway Patrol now open longer

In an effort to be more accessible to busy California motorists, the California Highway Patrol began a three month experiment on Tuesday, September 5, 1989, to extend the hours its field offices are open to the public.

"The new hours are part of an effort to improve our service to the public," Highway Patrol Commissioner Maury Hannigan said in heralding the new timetable.

Hannigan characterized these longer hours as recognition of a contemporary reality. "In most California homes today, wife and husband both work full-time," he noted. "Consequently, it's a burden for either of them to get to an agency with 8 to 5 office hours. These longer hours should ease that burden.

The doors of many of the Highway Patrol's field offices will open at 7 a.m. Monday through Friday. Many will also remain open until 6 p.m. Then offices, at least one in each of the CHP's eight field divisions, will be open on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"The California Highway Patrol prides itself on being a service-oriented organization," Hannigan said. "That's why we're experimenting with an 11-hour day in some of the larger commands. Then offices—in Redding, Sacramento, Hayward, East Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Ventura, Riverside and Bakersfield—will try the Saturday office hours.

"A number of businesses, banks in particular, have recognized that traditional business hours can work a hardship on the public they serve. We feel an obligation to try to be just as responsive to changing public demand."

The Highway Patrol will decide in three months whether to extend, expand or discontinue both the extended hours program and the "open Saturday" project, depending on the number of customers, public response and the effect of the two experiments on CHP personnel.

Locally, Captain D.J. Watkins, Commander of the El Cajon Area Office, announced that starting September 5, his office will be open 7 a.m.-6 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Joe Freed on the movies

'The Package'

This week's review is preceded by an incredibly biased and condescending piece of sermonizing:

When I went to see this movie, I noticed something that really bothered me. Here it was, a Saturday night, only the second day of the film's nationwide release, and the theater was half empty. An I couldn't figure out why.

It couldn't have been the movie itself—films like "The Package," which are based on international intrigue and mystery always make lots of money—and it couldn't be the actors, who all did a fantastic job. It also couldn't have been the advertising because many television ads were aired. So what was the problem?

I've concluded that the average American sometimes overlooks quality cinema and instead pays money to see garbage. That's why "The Package" wasn't showing to a packed house—moviegoers were too busy watching "Uncle Buck's" John Candy get smacked in the head with a bowling ball.

Come on moviegoers—get with the program!

Here endeth the sermon. Thank you for your cooperation.

All kidding aside, "The Package," starring Gene Hackman, is a very exciting movie made in the spirit of other governmental thrillers like "No Way Out" and "The Day of The Jackal."

I know Hackman doesn't appeal to younger audiences like say, Kevin Costner would, but those who aren't familiar with his work should know he is a fantastic actor, especially in this genre. Mature audiences undoubtedly will enjoy this film a great deal.

Its appeal can be tied simply to its premise—the possibility of a nuclear treaty between the Soviet Union and the United States, supported by both the President and the Soviet Secretary General (who bears a striking resemblance to Gorbachev).

There is a sense of peace and joy in both nations until.... Some top American and Soviet military leaders believe in "peace through strength" so strongly that they will do anything to prevent the signing of the treaty—even assassinate the Secretary General.

Through a complex turn of events and adventures (which I won't spoil), it lies with Hackman to stop the assassins. Of course, I won't blow the ending, but believe me, it is very intense.

"The Package's" intensity is probably the result of the audience's emotion not only toward the activity on the screen, but also toward their own lives.

We have all lived for so long under the burdens of possible nuclear destruction that we naturally become enraged when we see our own military leaders thwarting peace, even if it is only a movie.

Hackman is great, as he always is, and there is some fine supporting acting by Joanna Cassidy as his wife and by Tommy Lee Jones as one of the evil-doers.

I'm hoping "The Package" will profit from word-of-mouth advertisers, as other summer films like "When Harry Met Sally..." have done, so that it may reach the audience it deserves. So many horrible films are released these days that it would be a shame to see a good one go unnoticed.

Suspect in stabbing sought

Sheriff's Homicide Detectives are investigating the stabbing of a Bonita woman that occurred August 18th in the 5300 block of Bonita Road. Cheri Lynn Peterson was at home alone when the attacker entered her residence between 9:00 and 10:00 a.m. The suspect is described as an oriental male in his thirty's, slim build, 130-140 pounds, black hair, no facial hair, and wearing blue mechanic's-style clothing.

A point of entry was not determined. Investigation of the scene indicates a struggle took place in a bedroom. Peterson resisted the attack and the suspect fled the scene. Peterson then left the house and collapsed at the foot of the driveway where she was discovered by a neighbor. Peterson was transported to Mercy Hospital where she underwent surgery for multiple stab wounds.

She was reportedly in good condition. Sheriff's investigation is continuing.

Waterhogs never know when to stop. They happily scrub down the hood, getting their pride and joy to gleam.

And behind them, the hose gushes gallon after gallon of water down the gutter.

How do you know when you're using too much of a good thing?

If it's beginning to look like you could wade across your driveway, you've gone too far.

Long before you reach that point, however, you can go from waterhog to water tight.

Use a nozzle with an automatic shut-off on all your hoses. Use a bucket to soap your car. Spray to wet. Spray to rinse. It's easy.

Let's make waterhogs an endangered species.

The more we conserve, the better. For example, replace your old shower head with a nice new one that uses less water. Make sure to check all your faucets and pipes for leaks, then fix 'em. And wait for full loads before turning on your dishwasher or washing machine.

Conservation. Our way of life.

There's a lot we can do to be water tight. Quench your thirst for more information. Just give us a call at 619/297-3218.

Commentary

by Max Goodwin

Come on, Roxani. Give your sisters a break.

If this trend keeps up, the day may come when a woman won't even be able to get her name on an election ballot.

Shades of Rose Bird. Bird disenchanted the public several years ago when she, as a State Justice, alienated the public—males as well as females—with her kinky determinations. She was later wasted by the voters.

Roxani Gillespie is following in Rose Bird's wobbly footsteps. Roxani, 47, you will recall, was appointed deputy insurance commissioner in 1983 by Governor Deukmajian and she floated to the top as state insurance commissioner in 1986.

Gillespie, as it was with Bird, had been a rather obscure figure, and has become controversial due to way of interpreting the new voter-approved (1988) Proposition 103 by which auto insurance rates were supposed to be reduced by 20%.

Voters approved the proposition. It became law. But Gillespie rose above the law and refused to enforce it.

Now, she has been called to appear before a state senate committee to explain how and why she decided that more than 400 California insurance firms will be exempt from the 20% auto insurance rollback as ordered by the voters via Proposition 103.

The author of Prop. 103, Harvey Rosenfield, pleaded for the governor to fire Gillespie because she is "hopelessly biased toward the insurance industry."

Gillespie denied the charge . . . and failed to appear at last week's senate hearing.

The hearings are being conducted by state Senator Alan Robbins of Van Nuys, who warned Gillespie that if she didn't show up for the next hearing she would be subpoenaed.

Equally interesting, Gillespie is reported to have hired a political consultant to assess her chances of being elected to the post when the job becomes an elected one in 1990.

She is said to have acquired Stu Mollrich, a Southern California political advisor to research her chances of being elected.

Mollrich helped run the successful campaign which dumped Rose Bird as California chief justice.

Backdrop for this machination is the insurance firms licensed to operate in California who are being sullied for their alleged part in the "will of the people" proposition.

Happily, we said good-bye to Bird. Now let's say good-bye to Gillespie.

A Bakker's Dozen (One for the Lord & 12 for Jim)

*There once was a Bakker named Jim,
Whose bread making days are now mighty slim.
He's again ready and raring to go.
As Tammy really kneads the dough.
He said, "It was all a pardonable sin,"
So keep those cards and letters coming in.*

T.V. evangelism is beginning to give me the "Jimmys," Jimmy Bakker and Jimmy Swaggert to name just a couple. The many anti-Christ people of the country are sure having a field day over the Bakker and Swaggert scandals, not forgetting the Oral Robert's incredible demand of God. It reflects criticism on all religions, legitimate or corrupt, T.V. evangelist or the minister of our local church.

One good thing that has come out of the Bakker scandal was the exposure of several of the presidential candidates. The American people are getting more concerned as to who will lead them. "Who can you trust anymore?" Nowadays you better not have any old skeletons in your closet if you want to seek public office. Are we going to be too critical? Can we believe in people using the worn-out dodge, "Born again?" That familiar cop out has been used by several Watergate "cover-uppers."

The Jimmys and God only knows how many more so-called "Men of the Cloth" have taken the many poor little old ladies for their last few pennies. These multi-million dollar organizations such as the PTL (Pretty Tricky Lot) have done a good job at spreading the "Word," but when I hear of the lifestyles of the supposedly humble disciples of God, it makes me cringe.

The thoughts of their million dollar mansions, Rolls-Royce automobiles, air conditioned dog houses, Tammy's spending sprees, and the exuberant salaries will make me think twice before I ever send in another check.

Now on Sunday morning all you see and hear on T.V. are the evangelists begging for money to keep their outfit from going broke. "More begging than preaching." Sunday morning T.V. church was meant for the shut-ins and has since become a lame excuse for not attending the local church of our choice.

The foreign missionaries are doing a good job of educating the poor lost souls of the world about our Lord, but we also need missionaries for our local community, our block, our next door neighbor, and that is "You."

Let's all support the local church by attending regularly and giving them part of the money that we were giving to the T.V. evangelist.

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges

The teams are lining up and the gamblers and bookies can hardly wait. Providence is about to provide them with megabucks.

The All-American, blue-collar betting season gets underway this Sunday as the National Football League kicks off the 1989 campaign. Major league pennant races add spice to the action, and the college season is a week into its odds making season.

It has been said that a real gambler will crawl through back alleys filled with broken glass to get down his daily bet.

Some guess-perts figure that before Super Bowl XXIV is decided in New Orleans next January 28, more than $30 billion will have been bet on the baseball playoffs, the World Series, and action in both the collegiate and pro football wars.

And as fate would have it, a lot of that loot is going to pass right through San Diego on its way to the border and the legal betting establishments of Tijuana. Handsome and self assured Jorge Hank Rhon, the owner of the Caliente Race facility and all its handicapping houses, has opened a sports book at the track and all its satellite outlets just in time to take wagers on 1989 NFL action.

Hank, 33, is learned in the way of finance. He will take bets only in U.S. dollars. Mexico takes about 1% in tax money from payoffs on horse and dog racing. Logic dictates the same approach will be applied to the sports betting books. No biting the hand that feeds the till, don't you know.

What does that do to the San Diego scene? Glad you asked, because we're gonna pay a healthy tab.

Weekend traffic from up north to down south is likely to get heavier than going home time on Los Angeles freeways. San Diego will be closer to legal betting action than any major municipality in the U.S. except Las Vegas.

How long before "runners" take bets from the gang at the office or the guys in shipping, or the gals in sales, down Mexico way to cover weekend football parlays, and/or pennant races?

Then you gotta figure it will be just a matter of time before some enterprising odds makers decide to handle the bets right here on this side of the border.

Why spend all that time in traffic when you can get your bet down at your favorite bar, cafe or ice cream parlor? So, it's illegal. So are lotteries, . . . unless the state runs it. Can the state hype betting on one hand and brand it immoral through the other side of its mouth? Does the betting population of Southern California interest organized crime? Will the state let all that income enrich crime bosses by default? Do you believe in the Tooth Fairy?

Legal gambling income is an, oh, so easy source of revenue for politicians who haven't got the guts to raise taxes. The best bet in the world today is that legalized betting will be the law of the land, both state and federal, in the next ten years.

Think of all the political appointees it will take to run such a vast bureaucracy. The payoff in jobs and political power will be enormous. And it's all there for the taking. It all starts with a single betting parlor. Even one across the border.

And who pays the price for all these riches? All this power? Why, we do. We, the people. The cost, however great, is all ours.

The Child Abuse During Pregnancy Prevention Act

The thrust of this legislation is preventive rather than punitive.

The pathetic "Cheryl," whose unhappy history was reported in the Wall Street Journal's front page story on July 19 on crack babies had given birth to seven addicted infants! Cheryl is an aggravated but not an isolated case: At the Martin Luther King Medical Center in Los Angeles, the average mother whose child is in the neonatal intensive care unit has given birth to two addicted babies. The experience is much the same in Milwaukee or Philadelphia or Washington, D.C.

The Cheryls of the world must be gotten clean—both for their sakes, and certainly to prevent the recurrence of the avoidable tragedy of the addiction of and damage to the children they bring into the world.

And so fiercely addictive is the power of crack, that the Cheryls need help to get clean. Some who learn they are pregnant will have sufficient maternal feeling and strength to seek treatment. But most will not, so powerless are they over the drug.

The purpose of The Child Abuse During Pregnancy Prevention Act is not to imprison or punish substance-abusing mothers. It is to protect infants from the substance abuse of their mothers. Yes, the bill contemplates that states will act to prevent the recurrence of such child abuse by giving the courts jurisdiction to confine the mother who bears an addicted child for prolonged mandatory rehabilitation . . . because it is fatuous to suppose that the Cheryls can get clean, or stay clean, otherwise.

But the custodial setting for their mandatory rehabilitation is not prison. Instead it is the kind of round-the-clock residential environment provided to recovering addicts that I have seen at California's Phoenix Houses or Oakland's Mandela House. But it is not and cannot be voluntary or outpatient care, because the addict needs to be protected from pushers and from her own weakness while she learns the tools of recovery.

To the substance-abusing mother who is able to seek treatment early enough in her pregnancy (within the first trimester) to avoid even more serious damage to her baby, the bill gives added incentive by providing that she will not be charged with child abuse.

For the substance-abusing mother who does not seek treatment and does bear an addicted or impaired child, the charge of child abuse provides the means whereby the state can gain control of mother and child and impose mandatory rehabilitation on the mother.

When she has completed rehabilitation and is certified as a good risk by competent medical authority, she can be released on probation on condition that she refrain from substance abuse and from association with known pushers and users. If she stays clean throughout probation, she would under the bill be entitled to expunge her criminal record.

I repeat: The point is not to punish but to prevent substance abuse during pregnancy. Ellen Goodman in her syndicated column wrote that jailing drug mothers won't work. Her fear, shared by perinatal authority Dr. Ira Chasnoff is that a purely penal approach will drive women who need it away from prenatal health care.

The correct answer is for the federal and state governments to greatly expand the availability of prenatal care and treatment, to engage in massive education and outreach to pregnant women, to offer them incentive to voluntarily seek treatment early in their pregnancy, and finally to impose mandatory rehabilitation upon those who fail to respond to such incentive.

Lynn Paltrow of the ACLU's Reproductive Freedom Project has complained (as quoted in the American Bar Association Journal for August, 1989) that a mandatory response framed in a child abuse statute " . . . is short-sighted and dangerous . . . These women don't hate their fetuses. They don't want to hurt their fetuses."

I'm sure they don't.

But the substance-abusing mother's intent is irrelevant to the grim reality that a 20-minute high for the mother means a 72-hour high for the infant and the strong likelihood of a lifetime of suffering.

My own view was clearly and forcibly expressed in a recent op-ed by Harvard Law Professor Alan Dershowitz, a celebrated civil libertarian. Dershowitz declared that through he is "pro-choice"—as I am—he feels strongly that the woman who chooses to carry her pregnancy to term is morally obliged to refrain from substance abuse or conduct during pregnancy that will injure the health of her child . . . and that the state has an entirely legitimate interest in seeking to secure the health of the child she has chosen to bear.

Even one innocent infant's suffering is cruelly unfair. No child should be compelled to suffer life-long severe injury and impairment as the innocent victim of his mother's substance abuse.

Our response should be more than shaking our heads in dismay. The time has come to prevent substance abuse during pregnancy and the epidemic of human tragedy it is causing.

Families Against Drugs program returns

Families Against Drugs, a youth recovery program serving teens, young adults and their families, announced it will resume meetings at the Fletcher Hills Presbyterian Church in El Cajon. The meetings are held every Friday night at 7:30 p.m. in the group meeting room of the church at 455 Church Way.

All interested parents and young people are invited to attend. There is no charge.

Construction on the church suspended regular meetings. However, with the completion of the new meeting rooms, the church encouraged Families Against Drugs to return. The church is not affiliated with the group in any way. However, they feel it important to make this service available to the community.

"There is considerable need for a program like ours, offering low-cost community service in drug recovery, in this part of the county," stated Ira Highley, president of FAD.

Families Against Drugs has demonstrated a remarkable success rate in getting kids off alcohol and drugs by offering a unique approach to recovery—an approach based on the 12-step philosophy of Alcoholics Anonymous where young people counsel young people and parents counsel parents.

Families Against Drugs also offers a daytime youth program at their headquarters, 7060 Miramar Road, Suite 103. For more information, call 566-1088.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's parcel number when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page or block number in the book and the individual parcel number on the map page or within the block. A parcel number as for example, "448-692-12" would mean Book 448 of the Assessor's Maps, Block 692 (Page 69, Block 2) and Parcel 12 within that block. A sub-identification number of 01 or 02, etc., to a parcel, as for example, "448-692-12-01" would indicate multiple ownership or condominium. The maps referred to are available for inspection in the office of the Assessor.

All property hereinafter described is in the County of San Diego, State of California, all townships being south of the San Bernardino Base, and all ranges being either east or west of the San Bernardino meridian.

SITUS ADDRESS EXPLANATION

The street address of the property, if any is included as shown on the County Assessment Roll for each parcel declared to be in default. Parcels without an assigned street number are shown as street number 00000.

Father and son take the challenge

By Mary Johanna Savary

San Diego's blue skies and consistently mild weather provide the perfect atmosphere for the sport of parachuting. The San Diego Air Sports Center, located just south east of San Diego on Otay Lakes Road is truly the "thrill seeker's" dream. It is also the destination of choice for a little "quality time" togetherness for forty-one year old Michael Savary and his nineteen-year-old son, Mike Jr. Both are from the East County; the junior Savary is a recent graduate of Grossmont High School in La Mesa.

The two got started when the youngest Savary was offered the opportunity as a gift from his mother last Christmas. After taking the beginner's course offered by the Sport Center, Mike Jr. made his first jump. The boy's father watched with nervous anticipation as his only son exited the small airplane some three thousand feet in the air. It was the moment his son's parachute opened he realized that this was an adventure that was not going to be experienced only by his son. The eldest Savary's eagerness to try the sport grew as he listened to his son yelling with joy as he descended safely back to earth, and the desire intensified even more when it was clear that the kid's broad smile was permanently affixed to his face.

Realizing how enthusiastic his father was about wanting to jump, the son knew that there was no better gift for his Dad's birthday. As an added incentive, Mike Jr. decided to accompany his Dad on his first jump. The reservation was made and the time was soon at hand. Michael Sr. was up early that Saturday morning and at the Sports Center by 8:30 a.m. for his classroom and ground training. After a half-day of instruction and training, the soggy clouds would not clear. The two "could be" parachuters, along with the sweating palms of the rest of the family had to leave in disappointment and return in another week to try again.

One week later, the skies were a crisp blue with no clouds to be found, Michael Sr. knew that today would be his day. Everyone gathered together again and waited impatiently as the arrangements were made. After a brief refresher, the father and his son, along with four others and a jumpmaster, scrambled into the small plane. As the plane lifted off the short dirt runway, you could see the senior Savary perched near the open doorway clad in his bright orange jumpsuit. He was to be the first out of the plane, his son third. The plane circled the "drop zone" twice, on the third pass, the noisy engine paused just long enough for Michael Sr. to do what he went up there for ... JUMP! The opening of the parachute brought sighs of relief to all those watching and wide smiles replaced the worried expressions. Everyone's attention was again focused back to the sky as the small plane's engine paused for a third time. Another open chute, another sigh of relief. The father waited near the "targeted" area for his son. Within seconds they embraced, and with laughter and excitement in their voices, began reliving the adventure again.

The San Diego Air Sports Center is owned by Don Mumma, a master "D" licensed parachutist himself, as well as a designated safety and training provider for the United States Parachute Association. Mumma states, "Over the last eight years, student enrollment has tripled at the Center; we anticipate two thousand new students this year alone." The cause for the rise in popularity stems from a number of reasons, but is largely due to the public's increased awareness of the sport. Parachuting by static line is the course taught at the Center, and in Mumma's opinion is the best and safest for beginners.

This adventure, that could very well be the biggest thrill of your life, will cost you $125 for the entire course, including your equipment. For an additional $15, you can also have a photo of yourself taken at the moment you leave the plane. There are some minimum age restrictions, but there is no maximum age. The only requirement is that you are in good health. Mumma recalled a new student at the Center that made his first jump at age 84.

In spite of the obvious danger, parachuting has been gaining in popularity. For many, it is the danger that gives the sport such appeal. It can also be the complete feeling of exhilaration as they willingly exit from an aircraft three thousand feet in the air. And for all those that take that first jump, it is, at the minimum, a once in a lifetime experience—one that tests the strength of character, and is indeed a personal accomplishment. For most who desire an experience such as this, parachuting will be a safe fall back to earth and an adventure to be remembered.

Just for the record, the rest of the Savary family are still only tempted by the idea, but Michael and his son, Mike Jr., will be jumping again sometime this month.
